If you are not interested in an exchange, but solely looking to conduct research at a university or institution abroad, first discuss this with your study adviser and the teachers/professors of your study programme. Also follow the practical tips on studyabroad.uva.nl > internships & research.

Practical matters
Please keep in mind that studying abroad often costs more than staying at home and that you need to make the necessary preparations. You can find information and tips on studyabroad.uva.nl > practical matters.

Central Student Service Desk
The Central Student Service Desk is the first point of contact for general questions about studying abroad. They can explain the information that is offered on the digital platform Study Abroad. In case of more substantive questions, they can refer you to the designated department which can further advise you on the matter:

- Office of International Student Affairs
- Faculty International Offices
- Student Careers Centre
- Student Counsellors
- Study Adviser

If you want to study abroad for a semester or a year, a short term programme of a few days or several weeks may be a solution. You could enrich your resume by participating in an international student conference, brush up your language skills through a language programme, or follow an academic programme through a summer school. An overview of short term programmes can be found on studyabroad.uva.nl > short term.

Internships & Research
An internship abroad is a unique way to bring your theoretical knowledge into practice, gain work experience, increase your network and your chances on the labour market. This enables you to personally direct your studies and your (international) career.

If you are not interested in an exchange, but solely looking to conduct research at a university or institution abroad, first discuss this with your study adviser and the teachers/professors of your study programme. Also follow the practical tips on studyabroad.uva.nl > internships & research.

The first step to an unforgettable experience
The digital platform Study Abroad shows how you can spend (part of) your study programme at the UvA abroad. If you are considering a study, internship, conference or research abroad, whether you want to study abroad for a few weeks or a semester, a year or even your entire study programme through studyabroad.uva.nl, you will take your first step towards an unforgettable experience!

Exchange
An exchange programme involves students being ‘exchanged’ between two universities. Agreements are made regarding the entry requirements, the duration of the study period and the number of students that can be exchanged per year. As a student at the University of Amsterdam (UvA), you pay tuition fees to the UvA and are therefore not required to pay tuition fees to the host university.

Global Exchange Programme
There are also cross-faculty agreements between universities, where the exchange programme is not arranged through one particular faculty. This means that students from all fields of study are eligible for these exchange programmes. The Office of International Student Affairs (BIS) coordinates the Global Exchange Programme.

Faculty and Erasmus exchange programmes

Faculty exchange programmes are agreements between a UvA faculty and the faculty at a foreign university. Exchanges can take place both within and outside Europe, although most faculty destinations are within Europe and are part of the Erasmus programme.

Global Exchange Programme

There are also cross-faculty agreements between universities, where the exchange programme is not arranged through one particular faculty. This means that students from all fields of study are eligible for these exchange programmes. The Office of International Student Affairs (BIS) coordinates the Global Exchange Programme.

An overview of short term programmes can be found on studyabroad.uva.nl > short term.

Internships & Research

An internship abroad is a unique way to bring your theoretical knowledge into practice, gain work experience, increase your network and your chances on the labour market. This enables you to personally direct your studies and your (international) career.

If you are not interested in an exchange, but solely looking to conduct research at a university or institution abroad, first discuss this with your study adviser and the teachers/professors of your study programme. Also follow the practical tips on studyabroad.uva.nl > internships & research.

Practical matters

Please keep in mind that studying abroad often costs more than staying at home and that you need to make the necessary preparations. You can find information and tips on studyabroad.uva.nl > practical matters.

Contact

Central Student Service Desk

The Central Student Service Desk is the first point of contact for general questions about studying abroad. They can explain the information that is offered on the digital platform Study Abroad.

In case of more substantive questions, they can refer you to the designated department which can further advise you on the matter:

- Office of International Student Affairs
- Faculty International Office
- Student Careers Centre
- Student Counsellors
- Study Adviser

Study Abroad

What are your options?

You can choose from a wide range of options to study abroad.

Exchange

An exchange programme involves students being ‘exchanged’ between two universities. Agreements are made regarding the entry requirements, the duration of the study period and the number of students that can be exchanged per year. As a student at the University of Amsterdam (UvA), you pay tuition fees to the UvA and are therefore not required to pay tuition fees to the host university.

Faculty and Erasmus exchange programmes

Faculty exchange programmes are agreements between a UvA faculty and the faculty at a foreign university. Exchanges can take place both within and outside Europe, although most faculty directorates are within Europe and are part of the Erasmus programme.

Global Exchange Programme

There are also cross-faculty agreements between universities, where the exchange programme is not arranged through one particular faculty. This means that students from all fields of study are eligible for these exchange programmes. The Office of International Student Affairs (BIS) co-ordinates the Global Exchange Programme.
If you do not want to study abroad for a semester or a year, a short term programme of a few days or several weeks may be a solution. You could enrich your resume by participating in an international student conference, brush up your language skills through a language programme, or follow an academic programme through a summer school. An overview of short term programmes can be found on studyabroad.uva.nl > short term.

Internships & Research
An internship abroad is a unique way to bring your theoretical knowledge into practice, gain work experience, increase your network and your chances on the labour market. This enables you to personally direct your studies and your (international) career.

If you want to study abroad, you should start preparing as early as possible. The first step is to visit the digital platform Study Abroad. This platform will show you how to spend (part of) your study programme at the UvA abroad. If you are considering a study, internship, conference or research abroad, whether you want to study abroad for a few weeks or a semester, a year or even your entire study programme through studyabroad.uva.nl, you will take your first step towards an unforgettable experience!
